(DOESN'T THAT TELL YOU SOMETHING ABOUT RELIABILITY?)

At the recent Trans-AMA Motocross series, there were 8 grueling feature races, each with two heats, plus supporting races.

Against a field of 587 starters and about 80 different riders, 4 British BSA entrants finished 61 out of 64 starts (with no mechanical failures) and came in 1, 2, 3.

The winning BSA riders in that 1, 2, 3 order were Dave Nicoll, John Banks and Jeff Smith. Quite a tribute to their skill and stamina—and to the rock-like reliability of BSA engineering.

Shouldn't you consider that 4-stroke reliability before you buy your next bike?
